Abstract

In a comparison of comparisons, a project is underway to chronicle the histories of member societies of the World Council of Comparative Education Societies (WCCES). As part of this project, this Roundtable has invited past and present leaders and members of the Comparative Education Society of Hong Kong (CESHK) to share their experiences and insights on questions of the organizational history of the society, characteristics of the society, and contributions of the society to the field of comparative education. Speakers will introduce the project and share their own reflections on CESHK's progress in order to facilitate active discussion from the floor. The interactive discussion will be an important input into the compiling of CESHK's history, and will itself provide insight into how the Society can serve better the needs of both professionals and academics in the field of comparative education in Hong Kong.
